

Privacy Policy

Bailey Kennedy is committed to protecting and respecting your privacy. Our web site does not collect any personally identifiable information about visitors. While, in an effort to create a better and more useful web site, we and/or our web hosting company may collect general site statistics about the number of times each page is visited and the various navigation patterns through the site, none of these statistics contain any personally identifiable information about our visitors. The only way for us to obtain personally identifiable information about people who visit our web site is if that information is voluntarily provided to us via the e-mail function on our Contact page. We will not share with or sell to third parties any personally identifiable information provided to us via e-mail, but we may maintain and use this information ourselves to respond to inquiries and for general marketing and information dissemination purposes of the law firm. If, at any time, you wish for any personally identifiable information provided to us via e-mail to be removed from our marketing and information dissemination list, please send an e-mail requesting this change to the Firm Administrator via our Contact page and we will be pleased to honor your request. As with any e-mail communication, remember the disclaimer that appears on our Contact page concerning the security and confidentiality of information transmitted in this manner. Thank you for visiting our site.
